

OUR HISTORY

40 years ago and decades before it became popular, Jesse Cool led a movement of preparing and serving only fresh, in-season, organic and local ingredient-driven meals. Late for the Train (1979-2004) and Flea Street (1980-present) have come to exemplify farm-to-table, New American cuisine in the Bay Area and beyond.

We hope to remain the perfect place for you to dine and gather with friends, family or for a special business meeting. We all work together to create an experience that is nurturing, soulful, memorable and celebrates the bounty of where we live. We would not be here without you. Thank you for the decades of support and community.
